Bethel Voters Favor New School Building 283-15—Appropriations Up $15,000

Again this year Bethel voted to raise more than the amounts advised by the Budget Committee. In a meeting which adjourned to an afternoon session they voted the recommended total of $504,000, which will mean an increase of about $15,000 over last year's tax commitment.

Voted down were the articles asking for money to repair the lock-up ($400), and to buy the Day (May) farm on Kimball Hill ($121.1). The increased items are town officers bills ($400), Maine Publicity Bureau ($100), cemeteries ($975), and interest ($550).

Compared with last year's figures, road money is up $4,800 and schools will receive about $480 more.

The rate of pay for town officers will remain as before, the selectmen receiving $8 per day and the road commissioner $3. Yearly salaries are: treasurer, $300; clerk, $75; and health officer, $35. After brief remarks by Supt. Donald Christie, Stanley Brown, and Philip Chabourne it was voted unanimously to pay Earl Davis, school committee member, $400. This is reimbursement for expense borne by him in settlement of a law suit in the course of his services on the committee. Tax collector will receive 1 1/2% and 15 cents for each excise tax receipt issued.

After a short talk by Herman Mason his motion to raise $1000 for the care of old cemeteries was carried by a good margin. The recommendation of the budget committee was $25, to be used with $75 unexpended last year.

As expected, the school building question was the principal event of the day. During the discussion the measure was supported by Harold Bennett, Guy Bartlett, Supt. Christie, Charles Keokile, Elmer Bean, Robert Hastings and Mrs. Lynn Bennett. It was not favored by O. B. Farwell, Eugene Burns, Sherman Newton and Shirley Gilbert. Others speaking included Adrian Grover, Ernest Buck and Arthur Gilbert.

When the question came to a vote 283 favored the building construction and only 15 opposed it. Other articles regarding the building were passed with similar margins. The final decision was to raise $75,000 for the new building, the building committee to determine that the building can be built for a total of $125,000. If this cannot be assured, the project must be resubmitted at a special town meeting.

It was voted to sell the brick grammar school building to Gould Academy for $60,000, the proceeds to be used toward the construction of a new school building.

The selectmen were authorized to sell the ferry property at North West Bethel to the highest bidder, with the right to reject bids.

At the conclusion of the meeting upon motion of Rev. K. W. Hawthorne, a ringing vote of thanks was given the school survey committee.

The results of the two contests in the afternoon's balloting are first selectman—Ernest F. Blaise, 225; John C. Gilman 65, school committee—Stanley L. Brown 151, Frederick P. Grover 122.

LOCAL FIREMEN PRAISED FOR LOCKES MILLS SERVICE

The excellent performance of Bethel's fire department at the time of the E. L. Tebbets Spool Co. mill fire on Feb. 29 was noted by bystanders at the time and has since been the subject of complimentary letters. The company made the run to Lockes Mills and was laying hose in nine minutes after the alarm was sounded.

A letter from John Tebbets of the Tebbets company said:

"It would be difficult for us to express fully, at this time, our appreciation for the fine job you did here at Lockes Mills last night.

"I believe that from the very first it was almost a foregone conclusion that the mill could not be saved. Certainly, you did well to keep the rest of the buildings in the immediate vicinity of the mill from burning.

"I am sure all the residents of Lockes Mills join me in very sincere thanks for the many cold wet hours, and the splendid service you gave us."

LONGER LIFE SPAN TAXES THE HEART

(This is the first of a series of three articles on the human heart and treatment of its diseases.)

NO BIGGER THAN A FIST, pear-shaped, the greatest pump in the world for its size is the human heart. Though romantic fiction has spoken of a tender heart, shattered by love, no emotion ever has broken a healthy heart.

In action, the heart is one pump, but structurally it is two—a right and a left, encased in a single tissue sac.
Each does a different job. One sends blood to the lungs for new vitality, and the other sends refreshed blood out into the body to supply it with vital nourishment.

Each pump of the heart is divided into an upper and a lower chamber—the upper called the auricle and the lower called the ventricle. Valves separate au-ricles from ventricles and the ventricles from the principle arteries leading from the heart.

Used blood, returned by the body, is received by the right au-ricle from two large veins collecting blood from the head and arms and from the trunk and the legs.
Simultaneously, the left is receiving freshly oxygenated blood from both lungs by way of the pulmonary veins. When the auricles contract, they push blood past a set of valves into the ventricles. When the ventricles fill, an electrical signal from the heart muscle causes them to contract. This produces a gushing of blood past another set of valves, pouring out into the lungs and to the body.

Three heart ailments—arteriosclerosis, hypertension and rheumatic heart disease—account for 60 per cent of all heart troubles. Only rheumatic fever affects the heart directly. The other two impose greater work upon the heart.
Early discovery of heart trouble can do much to prevent abuse to the heart. For those over 40, a check-up of the heart at least once a year is advised.

Because of longer life span, more years of usefulness are required of the heart today. Conserving the vigor of life's vital pump is an important essential.

A large number of deaths from heart disease are preventable.
While degenerative heart disease is a hazard of old age and is impossible to prevent entirely, much can be done to postpone its onset and to slow its progress.

Early discovery is of the greatest importance, implying not only prompt treatment but also alternation of an often strenuous life. Treatment is based on the type of heart disease and is being dealt with on broad fronts—surgery, diet, drugs, antibiotics, and psychiatry. The scalpel is now probing the heart itself to correct damages from rheumatic fever and malformations of congenital origin. Even in severe cases of high blood pressure, the surgeon's knife is put to work—cutting nerves and restoring normal blood pressure levels.

Sulpha drugs are forestalling rheumatic fever and saving delicate valves from damage. Penicillin is curing bacterial endocarditis cases, formerly 99 per cent fatal. Dicumarol from clover and heparin from ox liver are reducing complications following coronary heart attack.

Along with increased life span and greater promise of research, important responsibility rests with the individual: this is to be alert in bringing symptoms to the attention of a physician early.

If your doctor tells you you have high blood pressure, count yourself among the many. Count yourself among the hopeful, too. For not only can much be done to lessen the effects of high blood pressure, but medical science today is making more and better progress than ever before against this menace to middle-aged hearts.

Most individuals, once they have been told they have high blood pressure, follow their blood pressure readings more closely than they do baseball scores. Paying little attention to the dips and emphasizing only the spurts in his pressure readings, the anxious patient keeps constantly in the back of his mind what to him or her is an inevitable or a risk. Medically speaking, this is a distorted, unreal picture of high blood pressure. High blood pressure is a sign of a condition; not the condition itself.

Contrary to popular belief, there is little truth to the rule that one's pressure reading should be 100 plus his age. What is and what isn't abnormal blood pressure depends upon the individual. What is normal for one person, may be too low for another, so you can't compare your blood pressure with your neighbor's. Furthermore, blood pressure can and does vary in any individual as much as 15 points daily, depending upon his emotional state and level of activity.

What is blood pressure? Blood pressure is the pressure under which the blood in the arteries is maintained. This is important to assure constant circulation and nourishment to the organs and tissues of the body.
No one can live without blood pressure.

In high blood pressure there is an increased resistance to the flow of blood, caused by a tightening up of the smaller arteries when they should be expanding. Greater pressure must be exerted to overcome this. It is similar to that of water under pressure in a garden hose.
When the nozzle is turned down, the spray of water becomes stronger because of the increased pressure within the hose.

The increased pressure necessary to maintain adequate circulation forces the heart to work harder.
Like any muscle working overtime, the heart enlarges. As a result of this extra load, the heart and arteries wear out sooner than they would under normal conditions.

EXTRA STONE is playing a new role in "The Aldrich Family" set-up. In addition to portraying "Henry" every Thursday night on the air show, he has taken over, in the past month, as producer-director of the Sunday night Aldrich TV show. Results are to the good. Everyone connected with the show is happy with it than at any time since the program went into production. And why not—no one knows and understands Henry better than his creator. The video version has popped up considerably with Henry's presence. Kara couldn't play Henry on TV because he's older than the teen-age Aldrich boy.

Gary Crosby's appearance on the radio program raised the program's popularity considerably. And now there's a talk that the Crosby offspring may have a show of his own. Mae West of all people is working on a new radio series. Several of the show's contributors since the only talent the Columbia has taken actually has to be a drawing, caricature, or a play. The Garry Moore show, depicting a full hour in radio, is destined to leave the air.

PLATTER CHATTER

MERCURY: Vic Damone comes up with another hit disc in "Kiss Me" and the always popular "In the Still of the Night." The Harmonies keep it up with "Touche Two" and "Harmonical Jingle." One of the most popular songs of the present day is the up-and-coming "Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday" and Kitty Kallen does a nice job of vocalizing on it.

COLUMBIA: Another good job on "Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday" is turned in by Herb Jellison. "Just for Old Times" is his coupling. Frankie Carle now adds an added and gives it a new twist in "Waiting in the Dark." "I Still Care" is on the clip. Frank Moore teams up with a new personality, George Henson, and they do a superb job of a new tune that's likely to catch on fast, "Wedding Bells."

SUCCESSFUL
PARENTHOOD

PLAYING GAMES with your baby is a part of your fun and satisfaction as parents. But with a little attention to his needs for muscle strengthening you can make these games contribute to his growth. The baby will give you the signal when to begin. Usually around three months, his arms and legs start to wave and kick strenuously in the air. Since it is time for the body to step up its straightening process from the curled up, prenatal position, you can help this along with stretching games.

A physical education teacher, who knew just what a baby's muscles need to prepare them for sitting, crawling and later walking, began when her daughter was three months old to devise games for the two of them to play together. Since it isn't a good idea to try just any exercise on a young baby, we'd like to pass along the skill in proper muscle training which this specialist used on her own baby:

First Stretching Game—Mother grips both of baby's legs, one in each hand, then bends them slowly until both knees push on the tummy. Now stretch the legs out straight, encouraging baby to do a lot of the pushing. Standing where baby can kick your stomach by stretching a little is a good incentive.

Second Stretching Game—At four months, try a little more complicated stretching. Lift one of the baby's arms and the opposite leg toward each other. Then bring them back to position, keeping arm and leg as straight as possible.

In addition to muscle development, exercises for baby stimulate the circulation in the months before he has the strength to move about much for himself.

ending in a stretch. Do the same with the opposite arm and leg.

Sitting Up Game—At about five months, the baby begins to want to sit up. Don't hurry this step, because sitting before the muscles are strong enough for their task might do harm. This game gives the baby a foretaste of sitting and is a lot of fun for both of you. With baby lying on a flat surface, stand where his feet can brace against your stomach. Then holding baby's hands, slowly pull him up to a sitting position, then slowly ease him down again. If baby shows any reluctance to follow your gentle pull upwards, don't rush—perhaps he isn't yet ready to carry the weight of his head with support. But a daily reminder on your part will soon have him pepping up to meet you half way.

Windmill Game—Because it has such a good stretch, this game is especially well suited to before-the-bath fun. With an arm grip, moving both arms at the same time, stretch so the baby's arms point toward the ceiling, back up over his head, out to the sides, along the body—all with a kind of circular motion.

Do the arm and leg games four or five times each, but the sitting game should be done only once at a time. After baby gets the idea, you can use this method of lifting him from his bed, several times a day.

I REMEMBER...

By THE OLD-TIMERS

From Mrs. Mary Stewart of Chicago: "I remember when Chicago winters were really cold. Deep snows covered the ground from November through February and sometimes through March. The old folks were always looking forward to the 'January thaw.' During January the housewives were busy running up sheets and pillow cases, trying to get the year's sewing out of the way before the big housework got underway in earnest."

From Mrs. Otto Haller of Springfield, Ill.: "I remember when my mother used to fill our straw ticks. I was a girl about 11 years old. We never had any mattresses, never even heard of such things. Whenever anybody thrashed, Mother and I would take our empty ticks to the scene to fill it with straw and carry it home, sometimes walking more than a half a mile each way. It was such a job, and oh, how I hated it! I also remember the 'bolster' which we also filled with straw."

From Robert H. Sedgwick of Chicago: "I remember those winter sleigh rides of 40 years ago and the group of joyous men and women who could keep the party laughing until everyone was played out. Who remembers riding in a cutter of a light drawn sleigh when it struck the switch of a street car track, overturning and dumping everyone into the snow? What a job it was to find the lantern!"

From Mr. Friendly of Frankfort, Ky.: "I remember when I had more contributions than space. How about it, folks? Send your memories of days gone by to me in care of Box 340, Frankfort, Ky."

LOCKE MILLS

Mrs. Mary Mills, Correspondent

Mr. and Mrs. Norwood Ford carried Ernest Cole to the CMG Hospital at Lewiston Sunday where he will receive treatment for a serious leg ailment. Mr. Cole spent several weeks last summer in the hospital for the same trouble.

Edward Chase and Robert Mason, who were badly burned about the hands and face at the time of the explosion and fire at the mill, are still at the Rumford hospital. Recent reports are that they are improving. Julius Robinson, who has been confined to his home, is able to be out around again.

A few of the finishers, toolmakers and machinists, who lost their jobs because of the fire have found work elsewhere for the present time.

Lee Mills is serving on the grand jury at Rumford this week. During the past week several of the school children have been absent and are absent at the present time with German measles.

Merle Lurvey left Sunday evening for Marquette, Mich., where he will be gone on business for a short time.

By feeding the towering Roy Wernemchuk under the basket, Woodstock Grammar managed to outlast a late rally by the fine passing, but under-sized Scarlet and White of Locke Mills 48-35. Wernemchuk sank 29 points. The greatest shooting performance, however, was turned in by Ed Mason of Locke Mills with his dazzling pivot and hook shots from the foul circle. Mason totaled 21 marks, followed by Melville with 8 and Chase with 7. Excellent floor games were displayed by Bill Seames, Melville and Chase of Locke Mills and Coffin of Woodstock. The Woodstock gym was kept humming by the Locke Mills cheerleaders, Kay Dorey, Arlene

WOODSTOCK HIGH

Phyllis Hathaway, Correspondent

Three new cheer leaders have been added to the cheering section. These three, Gwendolyn Cox, Sylvia Whitman, and Josephine St. John are doing a wonderful job—especially as the season is almost over and they had to learn the cheers in such a short time. The dark red skirts and gray sweaters of the new girls add a lot of color to the cheers. Woodstock is certainly proud of its cheer leaders. They have done a swell job all year.

March 2, Harriett Hathaway, Eureka business manager, and her assistants, Bessie Dunham, Josephine St. John and Alice Farnum, went to Rumford after ads. They reported that they had good luck and had received many new ads.

In the basketball field Woodstock lost two games to Hebron here Feb. 28. In the preliminary game the second team lost to Hebron J. V. B. 22-37. In the second game, the first team had a 21-10 lead in the first quarter, a 31-21 lead at the half and then fell behind the last quarter to be beaten.

Katahdin is the only major Maine variety of potato that came through the Florida tests this winter with enough acreage of foundation stock to satisfy all the demand, says Dr. Geddes Simpson of the Maine Agricultural Experiment Station. About half the acreage approved for foundation stock was of the Katahdin variety.
